Can't find a better cast than French Stewart, Rob Nagle, Emily Goss and Steve Apostolina to bring "Forever Bound" to the audience at the Atwater Village Theatre. The title of Apostolina's dark comedy refers to both books being bound...Stewart and Apostolina are book dealers, and a young woman bound in custody.

It's a thriller with lots of humor to temper the tension. It's eerie and dark on one hand, with the interaction between Apostolina and Stewart providing the necessary comic relief.

A fine production under the aegis of Ann Hearn Tobolowsky. Seems you can't go wrong at Atwater!
